

Business continuity management – a practical workshop

Date: t.b.a | Location: Central London | Days: 1

All businesses understand the need to keep running in case of disruption or disaster. But, most are simply unprepared for breakdowns or have existing plans that are either totally out-of-date or have not been tested recently. Having the right plan in place provides your company with a roadmap to continue operating under adverse conditions such as fire, flood, crime, IT failure or cyber-attack. All of these issues can seriously affect company profits and may give rise to litigation from clients or a failure to undertake due diligence.

This training workshop will

- Define what business continuity management is
- Define the business continuity plan and the procedures
- Examine the BCP planning life cycle
- Provide case studies and working examples
- Show the reasons why you actually need one
- Give you the opportunity to interact in a workshop
- Provide you with ongoing support if you need it
- Describe disaster recovery and forensic readiness planning and the differences between them
- Discuss threat and risk analysis

This workshop is aimed at middle and senior managers, or personnel responsible for business continuity planning. At the end of this workshop delegates will have a practical knowledge of modern continuity planning and risk assessment. They will also understand how to construct a plan for their company and know how to test it out.
